

(57) Abstract

Terminal equipment and a method of communication between terminal equipment and an accessory connected to the terminal equipment. The terminal equipment provides an application interface for services offered by the terminal. An accessory software application is executed in the accessory, and a proxy application is executed in the terminal equipment. The proxy application provides the accessory software application with the services offered by the application interface.

(Figure 1A)